

Impeachment Hearing Ends

FATTY'S FATE UP TO PUBLIC

Fatty Arbuckle's fate is now in the hands of the public. Following his reinstatement by Will H. Hays, the big question is whether the theatergoers that support the movies will go to see his films or whether they will be barred by local authorities.

The Los Angeles federation of women's clubs announced opposition to the Arbuckle films. New York movie censors stated they had no jurisdiction and that it would be a matter for the public to decide. Pennsylvania state censors take about the same view. Other dispatches showed Mayor Lew Shank of Indianapolis barring "Fatty" from theaters in that city; ministers, school superintendents and others opposing him in Milwaukee and acting Mayor Lodge of Detroit recommending that the police commissioner bar Arbuckle pictures.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Unless he receives a protest, Director of Public Safety McCandless will not interfere with showing of Arbuckle films here, McCandless announced today.

San Francisco—San Francisco, where Fatty Arbuckle met his temporary downfall and three times was tried for manslaughter, received news of Arbuckle's "rebirth" with comparative indifference.

Here and there was a note of condemnation for "Fatty" and there was as much said in his defense.

"I think such action is breaking faith with our children," declared Mrs. Torrey Connors, president of the California writers club.

"I am greatly pleased with Mr. Hays' action," said Gavin McNab, who defended Arbuckle. "Roscoe Arbuckle never was guilty; he has suffered much, and now he again can give to the world the clean type of films for which he was noted."

Denver—City officials indicated today that Fatty Arbuckle films could be shown in Denver. At the time of the Arbuckle trial, an order was passed barring the films. Since then, however, pictures made by the fat comedian have been shown here and there was no interference by city authorities.

Omaha—Plans for a public indignation meeting to protest the reinstatement of Roscoe Arbuckle was being planned by leaders of the W. C. T. U. here today. Dr. Jennie Callias, head of the Omaha chapter and Mrs. C. J. Roberts, a state officer, are heading the movement.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—Mrs. E. P. Schoentgen, head of the "better movies" department of the Iowa state chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution said her organization had decided to take no action in the Arbuckle case.

Des Moines—Films featuring "Fatty" Arbuckle, reinstated comedian may be barred in Des Moines, it was indicated today.

The matter will come before the city council in the near future, Mayor Garver declared.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.—Will H. Hays, head of the motion picture industry, has lost his usefulness because of his pardon of Roscoe Arbuckle, the Hollywood Citizen, the daily paper of the movieland town, declared editorially today.

"The work of Will Hays in improving conditions in the motion picture industry came to an end yesterday in his announcement that Fatty Arbuckle would be put back on the screen," the editorial declared.

BORAH URGES A CONFERENCE

WOULD INSTRUCT HARDING TO CALL ECONOMIC PARLEY.

Would Be in Addition to Proposed World Disarmament Conference Included in the Naval Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—A move to instruct President Harding to call a world economic conference in addition to the proposed world disarmament conference was made today by Senator Borah when he introduced an amendment of the naval appropriations bill now before the senate.

The Borah amendment would take the place of the house provision encouraging the president to call a disarmament meeting to take up things left undone by the conference of November, 1921.

The president would be encouraged to "call such governments as he deems necessary to send representatives to a conference which would be charged with the duty of considering the economic problems of the world with view to restoration of trade and the establishment of sound financial and business conditions," Borah's amendment stated.

No mention is made of what countries should be invited or where the conference might be held.

The Borah amendment also embodies the provision of the appropriation which specifies that the executive should call a new arms limitation conference to take up the matters of land, sea and aircraft armament "with a view to reaching understanding relative to limiting future construction."

Borah asked that the amendment lie on the table and that it be taken up when the naval bill is considered—possibly tomorrow.

"We are traveling in a vicious circle," Borah said in advancing his proposal.

"No business man or any one else who has reflected upon the situation dares to look over the next year if the next year is to be similar to the year which is just passing," Borah said.

"It seems to me that there ought to be a hard effort made not only to stop the threatened naval race but also to deal with economic problems. The question of reparations is the key to the European situation. If that cannot be adjusted, nothing can be adjusted."

"It may be possible in a conference of this kind to break the deadlock on that subject. If there is a better program anywhere around, I should be glad to waive this suggestion."

KELLER HEARING IS CONCLUDED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Hearings on the Keller impeachment charges against Attorney General Daugherty were concluded late today by the house judiciary committee.

LADY RHONDDA GIVEN DIVORCE

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Lady Rhondda, first English woman to be awarded a seat in the house of lords, a decision which later was reversed, was today granted a preliminary decree of divorce from her husband, Sir Humphrey Mackworth, on grounds of desertion and misconduct. The suit was not contested.

Lady Rhondda, daughter of the late Lord Rhonda, war-time lord of control and railroad baron is one of the foremost business women in England. She personally directs a dozen large companies in which she is the principal stockholder.

BARNES TALKS ON REPARATIONS

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Julius Barnes, president of the United States chamber of commerce, today issued the following statement with regard to the reports that Germany is seeking American aid in settling the reparations problem, thru the commerce chamber.

"This report probably originated in the recognition by all countries that a definite settlement of the reparations problem would be a considerable gain on the road to world recovery. It is natural that business organizations of the world should look for aid in determining reparations to America, which refused at the outset to share in reparations, and therefore has no self interest in the question."

"It is manifest that our American administration is properly exploring every avenue of hopeful progress in reaching a determination, in accord with France and the other allies, but it is certainly a mistake to say that such efforts have been suggested by Chancellor Cuno, or from any German authority. The action of the American government is certainly not based on German initiative, but is inspired undoubtedly by the belief that the peace of the world and the recovery of the world would be greatly facilitated by a settlement of the reparations question."

"The chamber of commerce of the United States, representing the business men of America, stands ready, if called on, as indeed all other business organizations undoubtedly do, to assist in such an effort."

HEAP GLAD TO SEE FLAPPER

Wisconsin Indians Greet Princess Gayfish With Big Celebration on Return.

HATFIELD, Wis., Dec. 21.—All day Saturday and far into the night settlers along the wooded slopes of Black river heard the rhythmic muffled booming of an Indian drum, the weird wails of the warriors and the plaintive wails of frenzied squaws. At the Indian settlement a quarter of a mile away the feast of Ojibwa spirit of welcome, was being celebrated in one of the wildest demonstrations ever witnessed in this district.

On a system throne built of bowlers, rolled from the bank of the river, sat the cause of the commotion.

Princess Newana Gayfish, eighteen-year-old Winnebago beauty, wife of Dan Gayfish and daughter of Chief Running Wolf, who was exiled several weeks ago because she had become a flapper and had bobbed her hair was back to resume her part in governing the affairs of the tribe. With her on the throne sat her eighteen months old baby, much awed by the scene before it.

Around them danced and howled their kin rejoicing in their return and filled with hope that the presence of the princess will shake off the ill luck that has befallen the natives since they forced her to leave the reservation.

Soon after Princess Newana had departed an epidemic of grip swept thru the tribe and although none died, it was regarded as an ill omen. The climax was reached when a hoot owl, known in Indian as Ungatu (bad charm), visited the encampment and hooted nightly for a week.

A council was called and the Indians decided Princess Newana must be induced to return, regardless of her modern feminine views.

Dan Gayfish, her husband, was selected for the mission and last week made the trip to Nebraska, where she had been living temporarily, with a married sister. Newana told him she was glad he came, but that he must promise her solemnly to let her live as a flapper or she would never go back to her old home. Dan promised and the pair began the journey back to Wisconsin.

Thus it happens that tranquility will soon regain possession of the camp, and it is believed there will be no more protests over whether Princess Newana bobs her hair, wears 'em up, or rolls 'em down or shimmyes when she ought to be dancing a la redskin.

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—Porter S. Hauser, who is called "Chicago's champion sheik," was sentenced to the bridewell by the latest of his several wives.

Rose looked at her "sheik" and sighed. "I suppose I ought to be real mean," she said, "but I just can't. I'll say six months and I'll be in misery every day of that time."

HUBBY IS IN QUANDARY

Dr. Salter, Husband of Mayoress of Bermondsey, England, Doesn't Know Where He Stands.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Dr. Alfred Salter, M. P. is in a quandary.

The doctor is all fussed up because he doesn't know just where he stands. He is a member of parliament from Bermondsey, but that is "small potatoes" compared to the position his wife holds, for she is mayoress of Bermondsey and in Bermondsey a mayor—with a gold chain and gown—is far more important than an ordinary M. P.

"I don't even know what title I should respond to," the doctor said, discussing his plight after Mrs. Salter had been elected mayoress. "Obviously I can't be called a mayoress."

"It has been proposed that I should be called 'mayor's consort,' but I have made no decision on this matter yet."

It isn't a title that is worrying the doctor so much, it's the duties of the husband of the mayoress. He doesn't know how he is going to fill them.

"My position is unique," the doctor said. "No married woman has been mayor in England before, although there have been several widows and single women."

"I intend to fulfill the function of the husband of the mayoress, accompanying her to social functions and participating with her in public ceremonies. I don't intend to interfere with her duties. She will shoulder those alone. But what am I going to do about those duties which have heretofore fallen upon the shoulders of the wife of the mayor of Bermondsey?

"There are many duties, chiefly of a philanthropic character, which usually fall to the lot of the wife of the mayor."

"It has been the custom of the wife of the mayor to preside over borough collections in connection with hospitals, cripples and in similar charities and be responsible for their organization."

"I have not actually made up my mind as to whether I should take up these duties or not."

"Flag days have been worked in Bermondsey by means of ladies' committees, with the wife of the mayor as chairman."

"I am afraid I should feel sadly out of place in that capacity."

The doctor has one hope and that is that his duties as member of parliament will be so arduous that Bermondsey will forgive him for not acting in the public capacity of husband of the mayoress.

STATE WINS RAILROAD TAX SUIT

PAIR TO DIE FOR MURDER

Appeal of English Widow and Lover Rejected.

WOMAN SOON TO BE MOTHER

Final Appeal to Be Made to Home Secretary.

Sentiment Holds That State Has No Right to Execute Unborn Babe by Sending Mother to Scaffold.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Mrs. Edith Thompson must hang for the murder of her husband, Percy Thompson, of which she was found jointly guilty with Frederick Bywaters, her lover.

The lord chief justice today dismissed appeals by Mrs. Thompson and Bywaters. They had previously been found guilty of murder and sentenced to death.

Thompson was stabbed to death October 4.

Appeal of the condemned woman, who admitted frequent attempts to poison her husband, probably will be carried to the home secretary, her last hope of life.

William C. Bridgeman, whose life, by a coincidence was recently attempted through poison, sent him in the mails, must now decide whether a woman about to become a mother can be hanged.

Mrs. Thompson is understood to be in a delicate condition.

Sensational Trial.

The trial of Mrs. Thompson and Bywaters was one of the most sensational in English criminal history. Mrs. Thompson, a girlish figure, who will be twenty-nine years old Christmas day, maintained her composure in court, and was not visibly affected by the verdict.

She admitted giving the man deadly poison but said she did so only to "weaken him" so he could succumb to heart attacks.

From June 1, 1921, until October 4, 1922, she gave her husband occasional doses of poison, while continuing to smile upon him and hold secret rendezvous with her lover. Finally on October 4, she prevailed on Bywaters to stab Thompson and so put an end to him.

Only once during the trial did Mrs. Thompson show emotion and that was when the bloody knife was exhibited. At that sight she turned pale and pressed her flimsy lace handkerchief to her eyes. At other times she appeared to be at a trance, unaware of what was going on around her.

After her conviction, the lord chief justice was stirred to her feet because she was to become a mother. It was held that the state had no right to execute an unborn babe by sending its mother to the scaffold. This will undoubtedly be brought strongly before the home secretary when he considers whether she shall die.

Defended by Victim.

Frederick Edward Bywaters was a young naval officer, befriended by the murdered man, and taken into the Thompson home at Ilford. A friendship between himself and Mrs. Thompson led to an illicit love affair, it was admitted in court and as an outgrowth of this, the lovers plotted to dispose of the unsuspecting husband.

"I put ground glass in his food, but I did not work," Mrs. Thompson wrote the naval man.

Their love letters were at one moment aflame with passion; the next they would be discussing details of poisons and means of disposing of Thompson. Mrs. Thompson admitted trying several means, without success.

Finally, one night when Thompson was accompanying his wife home from the theater, he was stabbed. Striking on his wife's temple, it passed on Mrs. Edith Thompson, who is about to become a mother in London.

They should wait until after the child is born to carry out the sentence.

BELL OBTAINS INJUNCTION

FEDERAL COURT ENJOINS STATE RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Permits Increased Toll Rates and Allows Exchange Rates to Remain as They Now Are in State.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 21.—The state railway commission lost the first round of its battle with the Northwestern Bell Telephone company over the rates that company shall charge in the state for the immediate future. The federal court granted the request of the company for an injunction, the practical effect of which is to allow the surcharge of 10 per cent now in effect to remain in force.

This means that the exchange rates will remain as they now are until further action by the court, but that the increase in toll and private branch exchange rates, which will add something like $130,000 a year to the company's income, will go into effect on the first of January.

The company will be required to put up a bond that, in the final hearing of the case, it cannot establish its right to the increased rates, it will refund the exchange rates, it will refund the overcharge to patrons. This is the usual form in these cases, and it was urged by the company, as one of its strong claims, that nobody would be damaged by the injunction if it gave the bond required by the court.

The original order of the commission reduced exchange rates 10 per cent, increased toll rates about 17 per cent and materially added to private branch exchange costs. It was to have gone into effect December 1st, but because three federal judges were not available to try the injunction case, the order was being postponed.

The company wants a larger net return than it is now getting, claiming it is entitled to 8 per cent, and the suit, from now on, will be tried upon the issue of what rates shall be charged permanently. The company asks for a return that means a 25 per cent increase in exchange rates, and a regrouping of its exchanges, with the same rates applying to each group.

The right of the state railway commission to direct internal affairs of the company is also involved in the final trial. While the petition of the company calls for the making of rates in advance of those now in effect, its attorneys told the court that the company was asking no more at the present time than to continue the present exchange rates and put in the increased toll and private branch exchange rates.

BROWN AGAIN IN LIMELIGHT

NOTORIOUS CHAINMAN HELD UP TRACTION MOTORMAN.

Two Months Before Historic Siege in Lincoln, Bandit Alleged to Have Pulled Trolley and Stuck Up Wilcox.

Fred Brown, Benson chairman now at the penitentiary for an indefinite stay, is believed to have re-opened his criminal career shortly after discharge on February 21, 1922. On the night of March 26, Gilbert Wilcox, traction motorman, was held up at the state farm loop by two masked bandits and relieved of a watch and about $14 in money. The watch has been returned to Wilcox. Officers are satisfied that it is one of the two watches found on Brown when he was arrested in Wyoming.

Two weeks ago Wilcox called upon State Sheriff Hyers and asked if it could be possible that Brown was one of the bandits who held him up. The state sheriff started an investigation. He learned from Warden Fenton that Brown had left a watch in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Johnson of Douglas county to be returned. A phone message brought Johnson with the watch to Lincoln.

Wilcox had with him a service card issued at Topeka. This listed the numbers of the watch. The numbers corresponded exactly with that of the watch which Brown had turned over to Johnson. The motorman, who was grilling Brown at the penitentiary Thursday morning, the chairman admitted that he had two watches when he was shot down in Wyoming but denied participation in the Lincoln hold-up.

Wilcox, when he approached the end of the car line at the state farm loop on the night of March 26, 1922, he had just looked at his watch and saw that it was 10:07. A few moments later some one pulled the trolley. As he left his place to restore the trolley, he was held up by two bandits wearing blacked faces. Officers and prison authorities at that time had information on the subject never will come from Brown. Asked if he will file a complaint against Brown, the county attorney said:

"I shall hold a conference with County Attorney Shotwell of Omaha shortly after Christmas. After the conference I shall probably make an announcement."

May 31st, Fred Brown, almost cornered in Lincoln, forced entrance into a rooming house on O street near the Rock Island and at the point of a gun, compelled a roomer to entertain him as a guest until the big crowd in the street had lost interest in the hunt. "The records show that Brown was paroled from the penitentiary on July 27, 1921 and was discharged February 21 last. Information has been furnished which indicated that during the parole period, Brown attended the Lincoln State Penitentiary and conducted himself worthily. After his discharge he jumped back into the criminal trail."

Under the arrangement which the traction company has with employees, the man who is robbed is out. In this instance, Wilcox and not the traction company was short the $14.

CONFERENCE WITH ARCHITECTS

University Stadium Committee Meets in Omaha to Consider Details of Proposed Plans.

The stadium committee of the University of Nebraska met in Omaha Wednesday morning at Architect Latenser's office to consider details connected with the plans. Those from Lincoln were Chancellor Avery, Elmer Davis, Marcus Poteet, Guy Reed and Harold Holtz. The Omaha men present were Mr. Latenser, W. C. Ramsey, Vincent Hascall, Sam Reese and Virgil Haggard.

The Omaha alumni have already raised a large sum towards the stadium fund. It is believed the Omaha apportionment of $60,000 will be raised without difficulty. The canvass among the business men is to be postponed until early in January.

POLICE INVESTIGATE CHARGES

Booze Party Preceded the Loss of a Sum of Money.

The police are investigating the loss of $250 from a Lincoln home, following a booze party staged in a Lincoln home in the absence of the one parent. Involved in the complaints that have reached officers are many charges. One is that liquor was carried to the home by outsiders; that two young girls were made drunk; that statutory assault was committed; and that later money left in the home by the father who was away has been missed. Some of the parties have been interviewed, while one young man sought has not been found and report is that he has left the city. No formal charges have been filed altho the matter may yet come before the county prosecutor.

SESSION WAS STORMY ONE

STOCKHOLDERS OF INVESTMENT COMPANY CONVENED.

Following the Wrangling of Attorneys, Committee Appointed to Pass Upon the Credentials of the Investors.

The dove of peace failed to appear at the meeting of stockholders of the Nebraska Building and Investment company called by order of the Eastern county district court to elect a new board of directors. Between one hundred and 150 stockholders, more than a dozen being women, in response to the mandate of the court, convened in the main dining room of the Lincoln hotel at 3:30 Thursday morning. The meeting did not get very far because of the wrangling of attorneys representing diverse interests. After F. B. Baylor, trustee in bankruptcy, refused to preside, the foreman was devoted to the checking up of the credentials of the delegates either in person or by proxy.

C. E. Harman expressed the opinion that the meeting was not legal, but he was willing to take the chair. The fireworks began when he suggested the names of C. J. Campbell, George H. Walters and Judge J. J. Thomas of Seward as members of a committee to check and pass on the credentials of stockholders relative to their right to vote at the meeting. Attorney B. F. Good vigorously objected to the action of Harman declaring that it was an attempt to pack the committee in the interest of Harman and his friends. Harman insisted that there was nothing in the charges, and that he had no personal interest in the matter except the good of the stockholders.

After considerable oratory C. J. Campbell and Judge Thomas were permitted to serve as a credentials committee. G. H. Walters acted as clerk. The process of checking it was declared, would take perhaps the entire day. It was indicated that there would be a fight over the attempted admission of certain proxies.

During the wrangling of the lawyers C. C. Flansburg and B. F. Good had an exceedingly warm encounter which looked dangerous for a time. C. J. Campbell took occasion to criticize W. E. Barkley and Eugene Epley who were present.

Trustee Baylor when asked to act as chairman said he was willing, but he said he would not in any way recognize the validity of the meeting. When an objection was made to his serving he promptly withdrew. C. E. Harman, soon after the beginning of the work of the credentials committee, left the room, declaring that there was nothing for him to do.

The clash of the lawyers prevented stockholders from taking part in the meeting. But C. J. Campbell, who is Ceresco, a stockholder, insisted on being heard and directed pointed remarks to President C. E. Harman. Mr. Harman told the stockholders that he was exceedingly interested in seeing the matter settled in order that they might get as much as possible out of the wreck. He was glad that the federal court had taken a hand, it meant that the best settlement possible would be secured. C. J. Campbell indicated that if things went properly that the stockholders would get more than thirty cents on the dollar on their holdings.

The proceeding asking the district court for a restraining order enjoining the board of directors from attempting to preside, or from interfering in any way with the meeting, from acting as judges of an election that might be held, was apparently abandoned in district court. No official filing of the case had appeared in the court house Thursday morning. The petition also suggested that the court appoint a special master to preside over the meeting.

BRYAN MAKES NO CHANGES

THREE CODE SECRETARIES TO RETIRE JANUARY 4.

Bross, Stuhr and Johnson Do Not Care to Stay—Others Remain Until Legislature Expresses Views.

Business as usual is the thought expressed in a statement issued by Governor-elect Charles W. Bryan Thursday. His statement relates to the business of the government, a large part of which he will take over January 4. To keep the code departments functioning until the view point of the legislature can be obtained Mr. Bryan has asked the secretaries of departments to remain temporarily.

Mr. Bryan made the following statement:

"The state government of Nebraska is a very large going business concern. As in private business institutions when a change in management is made, the first consideration is the business, not the suffer, and the public service must be maintained."

"With this thought as my guide, I have given the matter of a transfer of the business affairs of the state from the management of the retiring to the incoming government, very careful consideration during the past few weeks in connection with the very unusual conditions presented."

"The incoming governor was elected by a very large majority on a specific program to reorganize the state government, and to provide for placing the responsibility of deciding the state's administrative policies in the hands of the regularly elected state officers, who will also be responsible to the legislature for the appropriations recommended to that body for the various state activities."

"The legislature will convene January 2, and will lay before that body recommendations in accord with the people's decision. I expect to go before the legislature in the most non-partisan and open-minded manner to confer with the legislative body without the least desire to influence it as to receive credit or criticism, and without considering the political affiliation of those whose services may be used or needed to man the business offices of the government during the period that legislature is considering reorganization plans."

"I do not believe it would be businesslike, or fair to the public or to the legislature, or that the public would feel that I had been acting in good faith if I arbitrarily removed the employees who are now connected with the various departments, and replaced them with employees of my own political party without the legislature having an opportunity to act on legislative plans."

"Feeling that present employees of the state are under obligations to their government, and that it is as fair as possible, without prejudicing their own personal interests until an orderly businesslike transfer of the governmental departments can be made, until permanent reorganizations can be considered and the legislative viewpoint could be ascertained, I have been conferring during the past week."

JUDGMENT WAS TOO MEAGRE

Man Who Sued for $7,300 and Got Only $86 Takes His Case to Supreme Court.

Three banks are in a lawsuit that the Omaha National, which lost in the court below, has brought to the supreme court. C. M. Trotter was the agent at Brady of the Chevrolet Motor company of Omaha which drew a draft on him for $1,898, thru the Omaha National bank. The latter sent the draft to the First National bank for collection. Trotter paid the draft with a check on the First National bank and the Brady bank then sent its check on the United States National to the Omaha National.

Before the latter bank could collect on the check, it was lost by the Brady bank. The latter had found the check to it was not good because of insufficient funds. It then wired the United States National not to pay the check in favor of the Omaha National.

The latter bank claims that the stop payment order was unlawful and did not operate to release the Brady bank from its liability. The Brady bank claims that it was merely acting as a collector. The defendant banks insisted that they should not be held for a loss to which they in no wise contributed and that as a matter of fact the Omaha National was not out anything because the check was merely acting as a collector. The lower court held that the two defendant banks were not liable.

INJUNCTION REFUSED TO THREE RAILROADS

Federal Court in Omaha in Divided Opinion Denies Petition.

ROADS MUST PAY TAXES. Otherwise They Will Run Risk of Big Interest.

JUDGE WOODROUGH DISSENTS. Because the Plaintiffs Had Not Appealed Direct to State Supreme Court, Federal Court Rejects Motion.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 21.—The state won a smashing victory in the federal court today when that tribunal denied the petition of three railroads, the Burlington, Northwestern and Omaha, for an injunction to prevent the collection of the full amount of state, county and school taxes levied against their property for the year 1922.

The court was divided in its opinion. Judges Lewis and Munger were the majority opinion which upheld the contention of Hugh Mamaster, counsel for State Tax Commissioner Osborne, that the railroads had an adequate remedy at law by appealing to the state supreme court from the valuation placed on their property, and not having taken that appeal the federal court was without jurisdiction.

Judge Woodrough dissented from this view. He announced, however, that as the same principles of law applied to the injunction suit brought by the Northwestern a year ago and which involves a part of its 1921 taxes, he would accept the majority opinion and deny to the Northwestern the injunction it asks. It had secured a temporary injunction from Judge Woodrough, but the decision of that judge now is that it must pay the 1921 tax in full because it did not follow the course laid out by the state law to appeal to the state supreme court.

The railroad attorneys had insisted that the law was defective in that it did not outline a procedure on an appeal or define what the supreme court could do about the valuation after it had taken the case on appeal.

The suit involves about $700,000 in Burlington taxes, $500,000 in Omaha taxes, and $200,000 in Omaha road taxes. The proportion of the entire taxes that they claim to be excessive.

The railroad have filed notice of appeal to the circuit court of appeals. It was determined that a final opinion will be filed before January 5th. That will be given under the auspices of the railroad attorneys and the state treasury come into office, and this will avoid the necessity of making them formal defendants.

TO GIVE CHRISTMAS PARTY

University of Nebraska to Stage Its Annual on the Campus Thursday Evening.

The University of Nebraska community Christmas party will be held on the campus Thursday evening with the program starting at 7:15. The party will be given under the auspices of the All-University party committee.

A large pine tree, north of U hall, the oldest building on the campus, will serve as a Christmas tree. Electric lights will be strung over the entrance and decorations appropriate to the holiday spirit will be placed upon it. The program for the evening will start with singing by the entire staff. Printed copies of the songs will be distributed.

Following the singing the Vesper choir, former Nebraska student will sing a solo. The Vesper choir will again sing and another solo will be given. Community singing will conclude the program proper but following the close of the final song a Santa Claus will distribute candy to the audience.

The community Christmas celebration by the university community is the first held in a number of years. Several years ago a beautifully lighted tree was a part of the program held in behalf of the near east relief and after the night of the program the tree was kept lighted through the holiday season, and hundreds of Lincoln people made special trips to the campus to view the tree.

HADDEN'S CASE TO JURY

Alleged Dr. Robert W. Huffman Owed Him for Operating the Latter's Farm.

The case of Grant Hadden against Dr. Robert W. Huffman in which the former alleged the latter owes him $2,343.95 for labor and materials furnished on the farm owned by the defendant, was argued Thursday morning and submitted to a jury in District Judge Clements' court.

Mr. Hadden testified that he worked nineteen and one-half months on the farm, furnished board and lodging to the defendant worth $250, and supplied $43.95 worth of materials needed for repairs. He said his services were worth $191 a month. The defendant claimed there had been a contract whereby the plaintiff was to work for a share of the crops and stock in exchange.

PLANS UNIFORM BOND LAW

Attorney General Preparing Two Measures for Consideration of the Coming Legislative Session.

Attorney General Davis is completing a redraft of a uniform bond law which the last legislature authorized him to draft. Two of the largest bond law firms in the country drafted a bill and presented it to the attorney general's consideration. He proposes to make many changes in it and submit both bills to the legislature. Uniformity of bonds issued by municipalities is desired. The bond companies included in their bill a possible 7 per cent rate of interest and provisions for a longer term bond than the present law permits.

The attorney general will strike out both of these provisions in his bill. The bond companies propose to leave the present laws and provide that municipal bonds may be issued up to 1924 under either the old or new law.

The attorney general has received notice that the Colorado commission has completed a proposed treaty on water rights affecting users on the Platte river in Colorado and Nebraska. Mr. Davis and R. H. Willis, chief of the bureau of irrigation, will go next week to Denver to meet the commission. Efforts are to be made to submit the proposed water right treaty to the Nebraska legislature this winter.

COLD HAND IS GIVEN FATTY

MAYOR OF MANY CITIES TO BAN HIS FILMS.

Detroit and Indianapolis Among Places Where Arbuckle Comedies Are to Be Prohibited by Executive Order.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 21.—"Fatty" Arbuckle films were barred from Indianapolis theaters today by Mayor Lew Shank.

"Only the flappers and flippers and morbidly curious will go to see Arbuckle now since Bill Hays has reinstated him," Shank declared.

"The showing of these films is one of the things I'm going to fight to the finish."

Shank was supported in his stand by club women and leaders of women's organizations having state-wide scope.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 21.—"Fatty" Arbuckle's reinstatement as the result of Will H. Hays' "pardon" yesterday, met with cold response here.

Milwaukee citizens were overwhelmingly against the "pardon." Ministers, school teachers, business men and others prominent in public life who were interviewed were unanimously opposed to the return of Arbuckle and his comedy films.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—Movies in Pennsylvania will be open to "Fatty" Arbuckle films, as far as the state board of censors is concerned, Harry Knapp, president of the board, said today.

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle will not be welcomed back to the movie screens in Detroit, it was indicated in a statement issued today by Acting Mayor John C. Lodge.

A recommendation to bar all films featuring the rotund comedian will be sent to Police Commissioner Inghes, Lodge said.

INCREASING A BUS FLEET

New Cars on Lines Radiating From This City Are the Latest Models.

Manager Johnson of the White Transportation company, owner of the bus lines running from Lincoln to York and from Lincoln to Omaha, has put two new cars on these lines and a second car is to be put on the Omaha line just as soon as it arrived from Minneapolis. It is understood that it is to be here soon, as it is about complete.

The new cars are already in service. They are two ton White chassis, fitted with motors ordinarily placed in five ton trucks and supplied with special bodies that resemble street railway bodies more than autos. They are fitted with mechanically opening doors, upholstered seats with wide aisles, offering seating capacity for twenty-five besides the driver. The cars are so built as to give comfortable service to patrons. The machines have four speeds ahead and are very powerful.

Mr. Johnson has told business men here that he plans putting a fleet of ten such cars in service out of Lincoln and arrange a bus depot for the use of patrons of the lines.

INDIAN PRINCESS RETURNS

Exiled "Flapper" Is Welcomed Back by Tribe After Disease and Owl Give Warning.

HATFIELD, Wis., Dec. 21.—The flapper, although out of date in American cities, has staged a comeback among the American Indians, aided by none other than the Indians "Great Spirit."

Making a triumphal return to her throne, from which she had been driven for violating an age-old tribal custom by bobbing her hair, News Gayfish, "flapper princess" of the Black River Indians, was back with her tribe today, revered more than ever.

Princess Gayfish was exiled several weeks ago when her people saw what

FIRST WOMAN DOOMED TO DIE ON THE SCAFFOLD IN ENGLAND IN THIRTY YEARS

One of England's most sensational and dramatic murder trials ended in the conviction of Frederick Bywaters sentenced to death for the killing of the woman's husband, London dispatches state that Bywaters' youth—he is only twenty-one—and Mrs. Thompson's sex may lighten the sentence. It is thirty years since a woman was executed for murder in England. It is also rumored that the execution of Mrs. Thompson may be stayed because she is about to become a mother. She is eight years older than Bywaters. It developed at the trial that Bywaters stabbed Thompson to death after his wife's attempts to poison him failed.

she had done to her hair. Accompanied by her eighteen-months-old son, she went to Nebraska.

Trouble, however, soon developed among the squares and braves of the Black River tribe. Influenza came and took several to the happy hunting grounds. The survivors were frightened. Then came a huge owl, regarded as the worst omen available in Indian superstition.

The chieftains shivered in a power, and decided that these visitations were manifestations of the Great Spirit's wrath about the exile of the princess.

Dan Gayfish, her husband, was ordered to go and find her. They returned Sunday night and the festivities still are in progress.

DENVER POLICE BELIEVE IT MAY LEAD TO ROBBERS.

Finger Prints on Stuck Compared With Those on Automobile Thought Stolen and Abandoned by Mint Bandits.

DENVER, Dec. 21.—Police pinned their hopes today of discovery of the bandits who staged the daring hold-up in front of the mint here Monday on the bloody shotgun thrown away by one of the bandits as they fled from the scene of the robbery. Finger prints of the gun stock were being compared with those on an automobile believed to have been stolen and abandoned by the men.

A pawn broker yesterday told detectives that the shotgun had been purchased by a well dressed man a few days before the holdup. Efforts were redoubled today to find this man who is believed to be in Denver.

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 21.—Joe Wagner, underworld character, was held in jail at St. Joseph, Mo., today in connection with the robbery of $200,000 at the United States mint in Denver.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 21.—The Christmas spirit invaded Judge William Bleakley's court here and obtained the release of Lincoln Brown, charged with theft.

"My name is Marion Brown and I am nine years old. I have two sisters and four brothers. My mother says you might take daddy away for Christmas. Daddy always trims the Christmas tree and he has to go to the hospital and get my little sister so she can see Santa Claus. Daddy took her to the hospital last September after she had been nearly burned to death by a bonfire. If I send you a picture, will you be good to daddy?"

The judge's voice was husky when he finished reading. Brown burst into tears. He was placed on probation for a year.

WITNESS OF HERRIN KILLINGS GIVES TESTIMONY.

Mail Carrier Declares Alleged Leader of Mob Showed Him Shells Taken From Superintendent's Pocket.

MARION, Ill., Dec. 21.—A. W. Steele today testified regarding scenes at the slaying of twenty-two non-union miners in the "Herrin massacre" at the trial of the five alleged slayers today. Steele, foreman of a power plant near where the killings took place, told of seeing fourteen men shot down. He was a long distance from the scene, however, and was unable to identify any of the men on trial as the actual slayers.

"After the mob had dispersed, I walked thru the woods and saw the bodies of eight dead men and saw others lying in underbrush, seriously wounded," Steele stated.

"No one was making any effort to care for the wounded," said Ward Trolivon, a rural mail carrier, who followed Steele on the stand.

His testimony was directed against Otis Clark, one of the five on trial and alleged leader of the mob.

"I was in my father's garage following the killings, when Clark came into the place and showed me some shells which he said he had taken from the

TAFT IS RECOVERING.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Chief Justice Taft of the United States supreme court is recuperating at his home here today from a serious operation several days ago. pockets of Superintendent McDowell. "That is the kind of shells they are using," Clark told me.

The prosecution claims Clark killed McDowell, the first to die at the hands of the mob.

C. B. Shaffner, hardware dealer at Herrin, told of a crowd of twenty men coming to his store on the afternoon of June 21 and demanding guns and ammunition.

"I refused them the guns because I didn't know them," Shaffner told the jury.

"Did they offer to pay for the guns?" the witness was asked.

"No sir."

"Did they ask that you charge them?"

"Yes, sir."

"To whom did they ask you to charge them?"

"They said 'Charge them to the Herrin local, or to Hugh Willis.'"

Willis is head of the miners union in this district.

"Still I refused to sell them," Shaffner continued. "Finally after Hugh Willis called up and told me it would be all right to sell the stuff, I sold twelve rifles and 300 boxes of cartridges."

Over a Year Was Required to Complete This Marvelous Motion Picture—Contains Thrillers—Directed by J. Gordon Edwards, It Surpasses Any of His Previous Efforts.

Jaded movie fans may now experience the big thrill picture who have watched with delight patience for the great American drama have looked in vain but the super-film has arrived, thanks to William Fox. It is called "Nero", and will be shown at Orpheum theater next Monday and Tuesday.

The bloody reign of the last of the Caesars is shown in a wonderfully thrilling manner and with historical accuracy. The picture was taken in Rome and vicinity, a few scenes are near Naples and in the Alps. An entire city was built on the outskirts of Rome only to be destroyed by torch.

An idea of the stupendous cast may be gleaned from the fact that in one scene 65,000 people were employed. Most spectacular films resort to humor for their effects. This one tells a story with a careful fidelity to historical accuracy that grips and holds. One is transported back to the days of bloody tyrants and Roman orgies.

WARNING TO CREAMERIES

ATTORNEY GENERAL TALKS OF ANTI-TRUST PROSECUTIONS.

Complaints Allege Big Concerns Are Trying to Injure Business of Local Creameries in Nebraska.

Attorney General Davis has sent a letter to six of the larger creamery companies in Nebraska calling attention to the law which seeks to prohibit unfair competition in trade. He refers to the statute which prohibits a company from paying more for an article at one place than it pays at another, difference in freight rates being considered.

The attorney general says complaints from Scottsbluff, Clay Center and Bloomfield show a situation that is deplorable at Scottsbluff, had at Clay Center and unsatisfactory at Bloomfield. He says complaints have come from many other towns, indicating that the big companies paid from 8 to 10 cents ore for cream than local creamery companies and more at some places than the same companies pay at other stations.

It has come to the attorney general through complaints that the larger companies take turns boosting prices, one company paying the higher price one week and another big company paying it the following week. At Scottsbluff it is alleged one big company has paid 32 to 34 cents for cream at some stations and paid 45 cents at Scottsbluff where a local company is competing for business.

The attorney general states in his letter of warning that he does not like to do an injustice to any creamery company, but that the effects in various communities may be sufficient to justify his department in a proceeding under the anti-discrimination law or under the anti-trust statutes. He expresses the hope that within the next few months will show such a change in policy as to remove whatever ground for suspicion may exist at the present.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

WORLD FAR FROM PEACE

JOSEPHUS DANIELS WARNS OF FUTURE WARS.

Former Secretary of Navy Speaks at Knife and Fork Club Dinner.

Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, was the principal speaker at the Knife and Fork club dinner at the Lincoln hotel Wednesday evening. The dinner was presided over by Walter L. Anderson, president of the club, and the speaker was introduced by James E. Lawrence. Mr. Daniels agreed with General Pershing in warning the people of the menace of future wars, discussed the German reparations question, stated that he believed that the Christian nations should combine to drive the Turk out of Asia where he belongs and favored some sort of league formed with America at the head to bring about a healthy, wholesome basis of peace.

Mr. Daniels did not arrive at the banquet until 9:15 because as he stated he drove down three engines getting here. He started on Wednesday evening and stopped at McFarland, Kas., for breakfast, being told that he would have plenty of time. However while he was eating the train rather impudently pulled out and left him. Not to be outdone, however, Mr. Daniels gave chase and caught it after a good mile of a nation running. He afterward wished he had not run it down as two more engines went on strike and the last one left him stranded at Plymouth, Neb. He found what seemed to be the only active car in the city, a Ford, and reached Cornsboro, Ia., and from there a high powered car brought him into Lincoln and to the banquet.

The room was beautifully decorated in Christmas colors and the Christmas spirit was carried out in all the arrangements. One hundred and eighty-five were present and the speaker's table was Governor-elect and Mrs. C. W. Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Anderson, James E. Lawrence, Chief Justice A. M. Morrissey, Judge and Mrs. C. B. Letton, Judge and Mrs. Leonard Flansburg, Prof. and Mrs. C. W. Taylor, Prof. and Mrs. M. M. Fogg.

Mr. Daniels' subject was "The Challenge of Peace." Mr. Daniels said that on reflection after choosing his subject he realized that there was no such thing as peace in the world today, four years after the armistice which was supposed to usher in an era of peace the world was still plunged in a state of chaos such as we had never known before. He agreed with Pershing in warning the people of the imminence and menace of future wars. At the time the armistice was signed he did not believe that after four years there would be nearer peace than when we were there. He wished that we might be baptized again in the spirit of April, 1917 or feel again the flame of patriotism that actuated us on November 11, 1918.

The boys went over to fight a war against war, they were fired with the spirit of crusaders, but today they feel, whether justified or not that it was a fool's errand and that the statesmanship of the world was not the equal of the sacrifices of the soldiers. However the freeing of Poland and the setting up of the Czechoslovak republic go far toward evening the balance.

The real secret and basis of the chaotic condition of the world today is the question of the German reparations. That is the big thing that has prevented peace in Europe. When the question first came up, President Wilson sent some of the most noted and able financiers in the United States to Europe to determine how much Germany should and could pay. These experts, after a careful survey, reported that Germany could pay $15,000,000,000. However when Wilson presented this proposal to European statesmen they went up in the air. France demanded $100,000,000,000. And because of the insistence of the people Lloyd George sided with the French. It was decided to postpone the settlement to May, 1920 and it has been hanging fire and causing trouble ever since.

As a result of the disarmament conference in Washington the competition of the nations in building dreadnaughts has ceased, but England and Japan have been building airships and the smaller types of war vessels so fast since that something must be done soon or our navy will hopelessly be outclassed. The house of representatives have asked President Harding to call another conference to try to avoid a renewal of the navy building race.

The challenge before the world today is that something be done to restore the world to some reasonable basis of peace. The situation in Europe, is that of the Turk all powerful and the Christian nations as supplicants before him. Thousands of Christians are being slaughtered and the world is saying, "Please Mr. Turk, do not kill too many Christians." The allied nations should combine and drive the Turk out of Europe back into Asia where he belongs. Some sort of league or association should be formed with America at the head to take a stand for a healthy, wholesome condition in the world.

Mr. Daniels has been a speaking tour thru the west for the past few weeks and is going direct to his home from Lincoln. He expected to leave early Thursday morning in order that he might reach his home in Raleigh,

N. C., in time to spend the holidays. He is the owner and publisher of "The News and Observer," there

MIERE MENTION.

Firemen made a run to a grass fire at 2257 South Twenty-seventh at 3:15 p. m. Wednesday. Slight damage was reported.

A considerable number of people motored to Lincoln Wednesday for the "Messiah" concert at the University of Nebraska Groups from Falls City, Peru, Crete and some other places were recognized in the audience.

Auto curtains and a motorometer were stolen from a car belonging to J. J. Kremer, of Milford, Neb., Wednesday afternoon. The machine was parked at Thirteenth and O streets at the time of the theft, according to Kremer.

Ettie M. Rankin filed petition Wednesday afternoon in district court asking a divorce from Thomas E. Rankin, alleging extreme cruelty and failure to provide. Mr. and Mrs. Rankin were married in Lincoln December 22, 1915, and have three children. The mother alleges the husband has called her vile names, inflicted personal violence upon her, and has since November 22, 1922, failed to support the family. She asks custody of the children and an award of maintenance money for them.

During the present week the city has issued warrants to contractors for special improvements in the amount of $47,084.13. This is just about the record for one week. Last week warrants to the sum of $18,454.37 were issued, a total of $65,538.50 for two weeks. These cover estimates on paving, sewer main and water main construction. The warrants draw five and one-half per cent interest. Disposal of Lincoln city warrants no longer is a problem. Contractors get paid or close to it.

Omaha school bonds totaling $2,500,000 were filed Wednesday with State Auditor George W. Marsh for registration. These bonds are the last half of a $5,000,000 issue put out without a vote of the people under the act of the legislature of 1921. Ralph C. Lawrence, bond examiner in the auditor's office, estimates that five days will be required for the work of registration. The bonds were sold jointly to a Chicago bank and a New York company for $20,525 less than par.

Train delays now are frequent because of heavy mail and express, and a fair amount of pre-holiday travel. Mail and express business is very heavy. One train was reported to have handled thirteen truck loads of mail and express at Grand Island in as many minutes Monday night. Such rapid work, however, is not always possible, but the business is so heavy that from two to ten minutes is lost at practically every stop. These delays, added during a long day's run, make the train very late at the terminal, unless the time can be taken up in runs between stops.

The committee for the state corn show to be held in connection with the week's program for organized agriculture, January 3-4, at the state agricultural college here, has made arrangements to have on exhibition in Nebraska exhibit which was on display at the national hay and grain show at Chicago, December 2-9. The exhibit received much favorable comment at Chicago. Those in charge of the program say this will be the best exhibit of its kind ever displayed in Nebraska and is expected to attract many visitors. It is mainly educational in nature and gives a panoramic view of a great part of the experimental work in corn that has been carried on for the last twenty years. It will show the evolution that has taken place in corn breeding in Nebraska.

Construction of the sewage disposal plant is progressing in spite of winter weather. The tanks are near completion and the concrete floors of filter beds covering approximately four acres, are about ready. The plant will be ready for business late in the spring. The city is rushing along with the construction of the last sewer unit to connect with the plant. Fifteen hundred feet of the fifty-four inch main have been completed. The distance from the plant to a point at Fifteenth and Salt creek where the sewer begins, is 3715 feet. The sewer

AGRICULTURE IN RECOVERY

MEYER DECLARES IT ECONOMICALLY STRENGTHENED.

Growth of Cooperative Marketing an Encouraging Development, Director of War Corporation Declares.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—American agriculture in eighteen months has effected one of the most sensational economic recoveries in history. Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, today declared in his annual report to President Harding.

"The farmer and stock men are not yet completely out of the woods, but in spite of local difficulties here and there and unsatisfactory markets, for some commodities, their position on the whole has been greatly strengthened," Meyer said. "They are still suffering from a burden of debt, the aftermath of the crisis, and some thousands of banking institutions in the country districts are in an over-extended condition. But probably at no time in our history has there been so rapid and extensive an improvement in our economic position as during the past eighteen months."

Meyer described the agriculture situation a year ago when the corporation commenced to aid agriculture, as a "desperate plight" and declared that the "stability, of our whole agriculture and banking structure was seriously threatened."

The war finance corporation immediately sought out the weakest spots in the situation, Meyer said, and applied to them the stimulus of needed credit. Its presence in the field was immediately reflected by a renewed confidence among agriculturists.

"The growth of cooperative marketing associations," Meyer declared, "is one of the most encouraging developments in the marketing of agriculture products in recent years, for it promises to bring about definite and reaching improvements in our whole system of distributing farm commodities. They have established methods which will facilitate the gradual, orderly marketing of many of our staple commodities."

CUT SWEETHEART'S THROAT

Omaha Rooming House Proprietor Alleges Girl Made Attempt.

OMAHA, Dec. 21.—J. V. Bruce, proprietor of a rooming house, hearing a racket in one of his rooms, rushed in and seized the arm of Louise Martin, as she was about to slash the throat of Joe Tunstall, her sweetheart, whom she was holding on the floor. Bruce told police. According to police, the woman accused Tunstall of being friendly with other women, grabbed a razor from the dresser, and was about to slash his throat when Bruce arrived. Tunstall was slightly cut about the arms and hands. The woman was arrested.

SHIP BUILDING IN SLUMP

Figures Compiled by Commissioner of Navigation Reveal Construction Decreases.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—While administration forces battle in the senate to obtain passage of the ship subsidy bill, the shipbuilding industry of the nation is in an unprecedented slump, statistics compiled by the commissioner of navigation revealed.

The slightly higher than in pre-war years, due to delayed commercial work during the war, construction of steel ships during the past fiscal year amounted to only 588,292 gross tons. Compared to this meager total, 2,000,994 gross tons were constructed in the corresponding period of 1921 which was considered universally as a year of depression in other lines.

BERNHARDT TO TAKE A REST

Famous Actress Had Previously Claimed That Inaction for Her Would Mean Death.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Sarah Bernhardt, famous actress, today consented to take a rest which she previously claimed "for me means death." Physicians who announced that she has passed the crisis of her illness let it be known that, after making many objections, she has agreed to remain in bed for fifteen days or so. The doctors ceased issuing bulletins. This was taken to mean that they consider her well on the road to recovery, altho she remains weak.

Mme. Bernhardt has become reconciled to her inability to appear at the opening of Guitry's new play set for Thursday, it was said.

BANQUET IN OMAHA FOR FOOTBALL TEAM

University of Nebraska "N" Men Are Entertained by Alumni of Metropolis in Celebration of Victories.

Twenty-two football letter men of the University of Nebraska accompanied by the coach staff attended a banquet given in their honor by the Omaha alumni Wednesday evening at the university club. Chancellor Avery, Dean Dawson and Harold Holtz were among the speakers. Robert H. Manley was toastmaster.

Warren Howard, a former football player at the university welcomed the guests and introduced each coach and member of the team by name and with reference to some special achievement. He said the alumni were giving the banquet thru sincere interest in their alma mater and as encouragement to the men to continue to fight for the glory of Nebraska. Chancellor Avery who replied to the welcome, and Dean Dawson who followed him, both spoke in somewhat serious vein. The chancellor said that Dawson had done not only what the alumni had wished him to do, to teach the team to fight to win, but had also taught them to fight like gentlemen. The spirit of good sportsmanship growing up in the student body was found most gratifying by the chancellor.

Head Coach Fred T. Dawson said the university could not expect always to be victorious, but could cultivate the spirit of true sportsmanship. He said the development of this spirit and not the winning of the game was the true thing. The retiring and incoming captains, "Chick" Hartley and Verne Lowellen were both called upon.

Regents Seymour and Judson were present and were introduced, but had been promised exemption from speechmaking. Harold Holtz, alumni secretary, was introduced as one who had done a fine piece of organization for the stadium and for university unity. The university chant and Cornhusker yell were given at the close.

During the dinner which preceded the addresses, numerous stunts were put on by companies from Omaha theaters. One skit was called the "Cowboy Preacher." The only fake element in the fun was a test of nerve of Captain Hartley who was told to not budge from the position given him against a screen lest he be hit by the knives seemingly thrown about him, but which in reality were pushed thru the screen of the other side.

CALLAWAY, Neb., Dec. 21.—While trying to control a frightened team, attached to a loaded wagon, Fred Zinke of Mulien was knocked down and the wheels of the vehicle passed over his body. He was seriously injured about the spine.

SIDE TALKS

(By Ruth Cameron.)

Surprising or Surprised.
Did you ever plan a surprise for anyone? Of course you have. And isn't it the best fun in the world? Did you ever have a surprise planned for you? Of course you have. And was it as much fun? Not quite? I thought not.

Now one more question. Do you trim the Christmas tree as a surprise for the children or do you let them do it as a surprise for you?

And all the time—I know a great many homes in which the grownups, under pretense of doing something for the children, keep the little ones out of the living room until they have the tree all trimmed so that it may burst upon them in its full glory Christmas eve or Christmas morning.

They rush about, those grown ups, plotting and planning with the greatest air of mystery, their laughter comes tantalizingly from behind closed doors to the children longing to get into the forbidden room. They have a wonderful time, these grown ups, over the tree, and all the time they think they are doing it just to give the children the joy of having the tree burst upon them in its full glory. As if they couldn't give them five times as much pleasure either by letting them share in the fun of trimming the tree or do it all themselves as a surprise for the grown-ups.

Last year I brought up this case of the children versus grown-ups in Christmas tree rights and I received the two following very interesting letters. I refer my misguided grown-ups who still are greedy enough to keep the fun of tree trimming to themselves to these letters:

The Most Fun of All.

"Dear Miss Cameron:
"It has always been my custom to let my children direct the planning and help trim their Christmas tree. I have never met anyone who thought this was the proper thing to do, so naturally your article of the 23rd was of much interest to me. My oldest boy is five, the next one three years of age and they seem to enjoy their tree more than any of their playmates enjoy their respective trees."

"You know that after a day their toys seem old but they seem to always find something different on the tree. They know the ornaments they themselves have hung, but are always surprised to find one that mother has hung. Many times thru the holidays last year I was called to answer, 'Oh, Mother, when did we buy this ornament,' or 'Who put this on the tree?' There was always a surprise and then some talk about the different decorations."

"While I am writing this the children are helping Daddy place the tree on the stand, and I know that no surprise, however big, could please them any more or give them greater enjoyment."

Ready for Santa Claus.

"Dear Miss Cameron:
"Your article in the morning paper was so in line with some ideas I have had for years that I want to add a suggestion from my own experience. For years I prepared a tree for nieces and nephews and I made an important point of needing them to help me get the tree ready for Santa Claus. They grew to look forward to getting the tree ready and pleasing Santa, just as much as any part of their Christmas and were so anxious to have it just as he would like it. I have often thought if others could have watched them in their eagerness and delight there would be fewer trees prepared behind closed doors. When Christmas came and their attention was taken with presents they had had that much pleasure out of the tree that they could not have included in their day. If those in charge will once try letting the children get the tree ready for Santa Claus they will never mind the extra work or a few broken ornaments."

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

What Mudge Won Mrs. Barker to Promise.

I WASTED no time in formalities with Mrs. Barker. I entered the dining-room in search of her, and saw the disapproving frown upon the face which she turned toward me. I took from my face the mask of shy artlessness which I had put on for her benefit, and pocketed it where I could get at it handily when I should encounter the veranda tables. And it was with a mien almost as forbidding as her own that I accosted her.

"May I have three minutes of your time where no one can hear us?" I asked.

She looked at me searchingly for a second, and then, her face clearing, she waved her hand toward a door at the side of the dining-room.

"Come into my own sitting-room," she said. "It is small, but it is the only place I can call my own, and no one comes near it unless I want it."

"I could well believe that," I said to myself, as I followed her into an austere, plainly furnished, but comfortable little sitting-room, and took the chair to which she motioned me.

"Now," she said, closing the door, and moving a chair opposite mine, "what's on your mind? Thought better of trying to pull the wool over my eyes with that 'best friend' stuff?"

"Something like that," I rejoined promptly, although the bluntness of the attack, coupled with the keen insight it betrayed, startled me. "I am going to lay the exact case before you, and I am sure you will approve of my course."

A Frank Confession.

"Humph," she responded non-committally. "Go on."

"In the first place," I said briskly, "Miss Foster is not my best friend, nor even a very dear one. But I know her quite well. She has been a guest at my home, and I would not state my life upon the certainty that in this absurd performance there has been nothing really wrong. But I realize as you do, that she has been highly indiscreet, as well as most inconsiderate of me."

"Naturally," I went on, "I do not particularly relish coming up here, either to see her or my husband, whom I blame far more than I do her. But Mrs. Barker, I have a little boy, and my husband has an old mother. For their sakes, as well as my own, I must silence gossip. Can you tell me any better method with most people than the one I am taking? It doesn't deceive you, of course, but isn't it really the best, after all?"

She looked at me steadily for a long minute.

Mrs. Barker Apologizes.

"It isn't often I'm mistaken in my judgment," she said, and I thought whimsically of Dickie Troop, "and when I am I'm ready to acknowledge it. I knew you weren't the fool unsuspicious baby you seemed, but I thought maybe you were trying to gloss over this because you had been cutting up some caper of your own that you wanted your husband to overlook."

I could repress neither a wrathful start nor the flaming of my cheeks at this interpretation of my coming to the rescue of Dickie and Claire Foster.

"You needn't be disturbed," Mrs. Barker said coolly. "I just told you I knew you weren't the fool unsuspicious baby you seemed, but I thought maybe you were trying to gloss over this because you had been cutting up some caper of your own that you wanted your husband to overlook."

"Excuse me," she said awkwardly, and I guessed that she was not much used to asking pardon of anyone. "I'm not usually so bad-mannered, but the idea of your treating that busy as though she were something way up in G seems awful funny and strange to me."

"But Mrs. Barker," I pleaded, with an honest effort to modify the woman's patent prejudice. "You are wrong about her. She is simply headstrong and indiscreet. She is not in the least in love with my husband, and she has not hurt me except by embarrassing me with this publicity. And we must remember that she is young."

"She's old enough to know better," Mrs. Barker returned uncompromisingly. "But I'll keep my mouth shut, and let her get away in peace, and I'll help you all I can."

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: A young man lives here in town I am very much interested in, but I have never met him. I would like to have your advice as to what would be the proper way to get acquainted.

I received a letter from a gentleman friend thinking me for a favor I did for him. Is it proper for me to answer his letter? SMILES.

SMILES: The only thing for you to do is to wait until you are properly introduced to the young man by a mutual acquaintance. BO.

It is not necessary to answer the letter.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl 18 years of age. I am considered very attractive and a good dresser.

I have a great many young men friends, but the one that I admire most is very bashful in his way. Others have told me that he thinks the world of me, and always comes to the house as if always so shy.

Please tell me what to do so that when he comes he won't feel that way.

BO: Just be sweet and natural with the young man and all you can do to put him at ease. Q.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 15, and I have been married for two years. I am the mother of a baby three weeks old.

My husband, who is one year older than myself, has already tired of me and has been going with other girls. Naturally, I am jealous. Should I get a divorce or try and get him more interested in me and get him more interested in me?

AN UNDECEDED WIFE.

A: Break up your home, my dear. It is discouraging to see your husband's interest wane. But if you make yourself and your home as attractive as you possibly can, his love for you will soon return. Good luck to you.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl 18 years of age, and have gone with a man for two years, for about a year. He has treated me very well. I love him dearly, and I believe he loves me.

He has been going with another girl four years, and when he met me he did not stop going with her.

He has asked me to marry him, and I would marry him if he would marry me. But I don't understand his wanting to marry me and going with this other girl.

He doesn't want to see me with any one else, and doesn't want to see the other girl with any one.

My father wants me to finish college before I marry, but I don't want to. He would marry me if I would, but for the fault I mentioned. Please tell me the best thing to do.

BLUE EYES.

BLUE EYES: If you are engaged to this man, my dear, it is your privilege to ask him not to pay attention to another girl. Make him see that such conduct is disrespectful to you and undignified for him.

However, if this girl is merely a friend, you are wrong in trying to break up the friendship and smothering your fiancé.

You are very young. Why do you not follow your father's advice and finish your education before you think seriously of marriage?

ANNE LAURIE will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

Why Sarah Siddons Is England's Most Famous Actress.

ONE of the pictures esteemed as among the finest in the world was painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds. It is "The Tragic Muse." It is a portrait of England's greatest actress, Mrs. Siddons, who was born in 1755.

On the edge of the portrait is inscribed the name of the great Dr. Johnson, who wrote it there at Mrs. Siddons's request. He said, as he leaned over to write:

"I would not lose this opportunity afforded me for my name going down to posterity on the hem of your garment."

No one has done a better job of her than the Welsh village lass—"The Shoulder of Mutton"—Miss Siddons.

She was a natural for Sarah Kemble, who was this baby, to become an actress when she grew to girlhood. And she continued to travel around the world in her parents' company of players until her father discovered that she was in love with an actor of their company, Henry Siddons.

So great was the impression she made that some of the distinguished audience wrote to her, telling her of her unusual performance. And in that day to act for Garrick at Drury Lane Theatre was the ambition of every person of the stage.

Mrs. Siddons was engaged to act for the salary of fifteen dollars a week. She was a dismal failure. She was cast to play "The Tragic Muse" for Garrick. She tried to play Portia in "The Merchant of Venice," but her portrayal was the worst of any actress of the time.

This was a sad blow to the ambitious young actress, but she turned toward the provinces, and worked hard on what actors now call "one-night stands."

Opportunity came again—this time in the form of another offer from Drury Lane. She was asked to play Southern's "Isabella."

It was Mrs. Siddons's great chance.

Dr. Johnson wrote his name on the edge of the portrait.

Without delay, Sarah was dispatched to Warwickshire, where she earned her living as a lady's maid.

But the young actor, Siddons, did not allow her to do this work very long. He hastened to her. They were married in 1773, much to her father's disgust.

For some time the pair went up and down England barnstorming. Siddons was only a mediocre actor, but Sarah soon showed herself to be an exceptional artist.

Her art was recognized the year following her marriage when she played in Cheltenham.

The play was "The Tragic Muse." Mrs. Siddons played the part of Desdemona. All of the century—the "people of quality"—of the surrounding countryside had come to see the company of actors. But to their surprise, Mrs. Siddons's acting was so fine they were all moved to tears.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Everything About the Home Helps to Make the Home

Are You Planning Gay Christmas Tree Decorations?

CHRISTMAS is almost upon us, and those of us who have children and a real home with room to spare are already scheming how we may get the tree indoors without its being discovered, and look one room for at least a day in order that we may do justice to our Christmas tree's decoration.

The best plan is to get the trimmings ahead of time, and also decide on the style of tree desired; so that we may buy or make just the right decorations, then put them away in boxes ready for use.

If possible, a tree should be put up securely on a good foundation, and allowed to stand indoors for a few hours to become pliable. Shape has much to do with the looks of a tree after decoration. Sometimes the shape may be improved by weighting down some of the branches, trimming them out in places, and inserting little twigs in other places by incisions in the trunk with a sharp knife.

A square of asbestos cloth spread under the tree, or a cloth sprayed with the fire-protective solution that comes for the purpose is a wise precaution. If candles are to be used, in some large trees, where possible, tiny electric lights are installed to illuminate the tree. Where candles are used the best holders possible should be chosen, and the decorations placed where they will be in least danger from fire.

Chinese and Japanese shops carry at this time many fascinating decorations used for their New Year celebration. These trifles are lovely for tree use. There are little air-castles, wicker birds, and lanterns, straw animals and many novelties to be had. Home-blown egg shells are used, gaily dressed as fairy dolls, and also the usual cornucopias, candy canes, clear candy animals, silver and gold fishes, brilliantly-colored balls large enough to reflect the lights, hard cookies cut in animal and bird shapes, then frosted with shiny frosting, gay bunion boxes, and, if liked, chains of cranberries and popcorn. Then there are the brass and silver filigree which are used to veil the tree after the decoration is done, and powdered mica is sprinkled over all to reflect the suggested sparkle of snow.

One lovely tree seen last year was decorated with gold and silver covered nuts, placed on every tip. Over four hundred nuts were used, and it took several evenings of labor to put a tack in each, tie on black threads to hang them by, then dip them in white of egg and roll them in silver, and give them a final square. These nuts, with the lights and some large silver balls, all veiled in silver filigree and dusted with mica, made a wonderful decoration for the tree.

Underneath the tree, on white cotton batting, a winter farm scene was placed. There were two glass lakes with reeds around them. Little trees of paper, small pastebord houses, tiny wooden animals, fences, barns, were doll farm folk standing here and there, riding in sleds and on sleds, small clothes-lines with gayly colored washings hung out, and all that came to make a miniature farm. This scene was made more than half the fun, after all, and the efforts put forth to make it.

YOUR HEALTH

How You Can Be Sure Your Child Is Properly Fed

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Commissioner of Health, New York City

U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State

IN 1886 there started in America a great battle against the white plague, which, of course, is tuberculosis—consumption we used to call it. In 1886, in New York City, the death rate from tuberculosis was 38 persons out of every ten thousand of the population.

Last year the death rate was the lowest of any year in recorded history, thirteen per ten thousand of the population. This is one-third of the appalling record of thirty-four years ago.

Eight thousand persons died from tuberculosis in 1921. Under the conditions of 1886 twenty-four thousand would have died.

In other words, sixteen thousand persons are alive and well today who would have died last year under the conditions of 1886.

This is a wonderful record. What a pity if the economic conditions of today, lack of food and the housing conditions, should renew the ravages of dread consumption.

To determine the degree of undernourishment present, the New York City Health Department last year made a survey of a large number of the public schools.

In certain quarters, particularly where many poor families dwell, the number of undernourished children was very high. In one school it was 73 per cent.

This means that out of one hundred children, examined only twenty-seven had the weight that their height and age demanded. Of course, a child might be underweight and still be healthy. The survey showed, however, that a very large percentage of these children were so undernourished as actually to be in need of medical attention.

It was found that many of these children were suffering from lack of food, milk particularly. The average consumption in many families was less than a cup of milk per day. There were several reasons for the denial to these children of the essential milk, chief of them its high cost.

It must be admitted, of course, that ignorance of the importance of milk is another reason that cannot be overlooked. Every mother should know that milk is just as essential to an infant and young child as air and water.

Milk is not a beverage, satisfying the thirst of the child. On the contrary, milk is a food, more important than bread, meat, potatoes or any other vegetable. There is no substitute for milk.

There are many things that will fill the stomach and satisfy the hunger of a young child. Unless they contain the vitamins, however, they will bring no growth or health.

Just what "vitamins" are nobody can explain very well. I speak of them as the "soul of the food." Certain fat-soluble vitamins, varying quantities and certain water-soluble vitamins, taken as food do not have them.

They are richly present in butter fat. The cream of milk tends with them. Skim-milk has no vitamins.

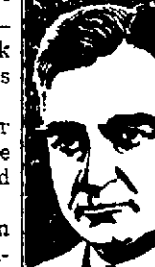

Cow's milk, while not exactly like human milk, is—after his own mother's milk—the ideal food for the child. In life's early months, "modification" of milk is called, but after one year of age the right sort of milk is the ideal food.

No matter what the price may be, every child should have at least one quart of milk each day. No matter how poor the mother, a way must be found to give the child this essential to his life and future usefulness.

Milk is the complete food, capable of making bone, muscle and nerve. Without it, the child will be undernourished and probably undeveloped in mind as well.

If not properly fed, the child is likely to fall victim to any wasting disease, all the contagious diseases, and, particularly tuberculosis.

To keep the death rate low and to insure long life and an equal chance with

Answers to Health Questions

MRS. E. F. O. Q.—My daughter, who is 14 years old, is 5 feet tall and weighs 117 pounds. Will you please tell me what her correct weight should be?

A.—Your daughter should weigh about 105 pounds. However, weight is entirely a matter of individuality.

A. A. Q.—My brother has a sore spot on his palate. His doctor does not think it is serious and only told him that he needed a vitamin. Do you think this is something serious?

A.—Because I have not given your brother a personal examination, I cannot say just what his condition is. However, if the area around the spot is diseased, it should be treated. Have him consult a nose and throat specialist for an examination and treatment.

A READER. Q.—Will you please tell me whether or not it is good for an eye wash?

A.—I cannot advise you about the preparation you mention, as I do not know anything about it. Boric acid solution makes an excellent eye wash.

MRS. S. S. Q.—About five or 10 minutes after I take a bath, my body starts to itch intensely. What causes this?

A.—You are probably suffering from some form of food poisoning. Consult a doctor who specializes in sensitization to determine which food or foods you are incompatible with.

MRS. H. E. J. Q.—Is it common for a child to lose the sense of smell, and can this be cured?

A.—There are many causes for the loss of the sense of smell. Accident, nasal catarrh, atrophic rhinitis, polypus or hysteria are the more common causes. With proper treatment this condition might be improved.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygiene and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Good Night Stories

DICKY'S CHAT WITH MR. ZEBRA.

WELL, you funny little mole-donkey! Dicky laughed, as he stepped the newly-striped little fellow behind the iron fence. "I never saw a donkey dressed so fashionably before."

"Tahaw! It does seem odd to me," growled the creature behind the fence, "that they call animals like you wise."

"Why, what are you talking about?" Dicky asked good-naturedly. "I'm no animal."

"Of course, I know you were a little boy," the creature replied. "I'm not a mole or a donkey, either, and I don't like to be called one. I'm Mr. Zebra, at your service. My goodness, if my mother were to hear you call me a mole she'd be wild."

"But I thought you were a mole from your shape," Dicky said. "You are shaped like one, you know."

"Never judge a fellow by his outside appearance," laughed Mr. Zebra. "Yes, I know we resemble moles in shape, but I'm wiser than you've never seen a donkey or mole dressed as I am."

"Well, I should say I haven't," replied Dicky. "I guess their mother isn't believe in white, for every mole or donkey I've seen has a darker hide than yours."

"I'm mighty proud of my white suit, and, above all, of the narrow black stripes on it," Mr. Zebra turned around and around proudly. "I always get a lot of praise for my suit, and I'm glad that my mother dressed me that way."

"I like your black and white coloring, too," agreed Dicky. "And I like the way the stripes run on your body. If the stripes on your legs ran up and down the way they do on your body, your legs would look all out of proportion. They look much better running around. Come to look at you closer, I must say, to me you look more like a horse than the shape of your body."

"Where did they find you, anyway? Where did you live before you came to this zoo?"

"In southern Africa, of course," replied Mr. Zebra, "where all the best-looking zebras come from. My goodness, we used to live in great groves in the wildest parts of Africa. When we traced or hunted food we always had a sentinel posted on a high place of ground to give warning if any one approached.

"I never shall forget the day I was caught. The zebra on duty went to sleep as he was on the watch. When one of the herd discovered it he gave the warning, and away we galloped, but the fellows at the back had no chance at all, and were caught before they could escape."

"I was one of those caught, but I'm mighty glad, for I'm better taken care of here in the zoo than in the wilds of Africa. I wouldn't go back for anything. I've grown to love the boys and girls who stop and chat with me."

"I'm time to close up, now," laughed a gruff voice, and Dicky turned to see the kindly keeper standing by his side. "Come back again."

Dicky promised, and waving his hand to Mr. Zebra he hurried on home.

WORDS OF WISE MEN

Hasty counsel is generally followed by repentance.

The end of wisdom is consultation and deliberation.

Men believe that willingly which they wish to be true.

We never know the worth of water till the well is dry.

The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness.

When angry, count 10 before you speak—if very angry, 100.

It is far easier to be wise 99 others than to be so for one's self.

A brave man is something a desperado. A bully is always a coward.

Let your mind's sweetest have its operation upon your body, lothes and habitation.

So great is the effect of cleanliness upon man that it extends even to his moral character.

YOST FIRST PLAYED AT WEST VIRGINIA

Veteran Mentor at Michigan Who Coached Nebraska One Year Started His Career With Mountaineers in 1894.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 21.—With the West Virginia football team leaving for the far west to battle Gonzaga college in an intercollegiate struggle at San Diego Christmas day, local followers of the mountaineers are looking forward to a victory, and at the same time are digging into the history of other famous eleven produced here.

The mountaineers have been great on the gridiron in other seasons, but not many present day followers of the game know that "Hurry-Up" Yost of Michigan fame was born at Fairview, twenty miles from Morgantown, and that he really became a great player at West Virginia university in 1894.

Regular Three Years.

Yost was graduated from West Virginia in 1897 and watched his first game on the campus here. He was a regular with the mountaineers for three years before his graduation. After receiving his degree in 1897, Yost went to Nebraska where he coached during the season of 1898 and from there to Leland Stanford, taking up his work at Michigan three years later.

An amusing incident in Yost's football career came about in 1896 when West Virginia and Lafayette college played three football games in four days. The first game was at Fairmont on a Friday, the next at Parkersburg on Saturday and the third at Wheeling on the following Monday.

Yost played so spectacularly in these games and the eligibility rules were in such a primitive stage that he was loaded on the train with the Lafayette team and taken back to Easton and prepared to play against Pennsylvania in the big game on the Lafayette schedule the following Saturday.

Charged With "Desertion."

The famous Michigan coach played less than one-fourth of the game against Penn, then took the first train for Morgantown to resume his class work. According to the story told here, the mountaineer players of that day refused to let Yost play again until the team for several weeks on account of his "desertion" but he performed the next season and was a great star.

While the story of Yost and his spectacular career is probably the most interesting of the history making mountaineer players, there are enough others about the stars of the early nineties to fill a book.

The mountaineers are going west confident that they will be able to uphold the standard of the east. The clan of C. W. Spears will face the Gonzaga warriors in good condition, unless there are mishaps before the opening whistle sounds on Christmas day.

Historic Bets on American Tracks.

The following is the sixth of a series of articles on big bets made on the American turf. Another article on how "Pittsburg Phil" won a fortune on Tod Sloan's mounts will be printed on these pages soon.

Riley Grannan was tall, thin, stoop shouldered. He had been a bell boy in the St. Charles hotel, New Orleans, and got his first job at the track as a clerk for Bookmaker, Mike Gray.

Grannan first began to win notice in the early nineties when, beginning with next to nothing, he won $50,000. He lost this as quickly as he had gained it, but beginning anew he came east and was on the block at Sheephead Bay with something like $100,000. He had not been east twenty-four hours when his fellows in the ring began to take notice. Describing him, one of the bookmakers said: "Chrystallize all the ice in the north pole into a piece as big as a pea and you have Grannan."

Made No Impression.

None of the heavy plungers, no matter what they bet, could make any impression on Grannan. He had not been on the block long before he began sending sarcastic messages to Mike Dwyer. He could have picked up an easier mark than Dwyer, however, for one day Dwyer bet him to a standstill on Stonewall, and Grannan took a vacation.

Riley Grannan first attracted attention the day of the great race between Henry of Navarre and Domino at Gravesend. Grannan was making a book in the ring, and when it came time for the race he took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves and said to the crowd: "Gentlemen, I have a few dollars I am willing to lose on Navarre, and I'll bet all of it that Domino does not win."

Mike Dwyer's money was the first to reach him. Dwyer bet $10,000 on Domino. Grannan laid $6,000 against it. Thousands of bets poured in on that day, but he kept the price at one point better than that offered by any other bookmaker. Before the horses went to post Grannan had $62,000 booked and stood to lose $37,200. Still he wasn't satisfied.

"Come on, come on," Grannan called to the crowd. "Surely you are not going to stop."

They kept coming until the start, but not too fast for Grannan. The other bookmakers laid off some of their bets, but finally they all quit. Grannan had bet them to a standstill. Domino and Navarre ran a dead heat—probably the most thrilling race ever witnessed in this country. Grannan had to pay over to the backers of Domino half the face value of their tickets, but he won nearly $20,000 on the race.

When Grannan formed an opinion no amount of argument could shake him. He would bet on or against a horse despite the opinion of the owner or trainer. He won or lost a fortune every day. It was inevitable that he would either gather in all the money on the race tracks or go broke. He went broke.

NEW YORK SOLONS BAR THREE BOXERS

Commission Advises Promoters to Lay Off of Kilbane, Wilson and Willard—Claim Big Jess Is Too Old.

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Summary warning not to try to do business with Johnny Kilbane, Johnny Wilson or Jess Willard has been served on promoters by the New York boxing commission.

The gentlemen in question have such self-assessed valuations that New York is their only field and the bars raised against them here keep them idle.

No Chance for Them.

William Muldoon says as long as he is the boss of the commission, the two Johns and Jess will not be allowed to gather any cash in New York because the Johns are posers and Jess is too old.

The chairman of the commission was aroused by the report that Tom O'Rourke had matched Kilbane and Eugene Ciriqi, the European featherweight champion, to meet for the world's title next summer at the Polo grounds.

The same kind of reports had it that O'Rourke, formerly a deputy on the commission, had signed Willard and Dempsey for another big card at the home lot of the Giants.

Claims They are "Posers."

Muldoon dismissed Kilbane and Wilson with the "brand of 'posers'" and declared them to have had too many chances to act as real champions.

"Willard," he added, "is far beyond the thirty-eight year age limit and this alone would bar him. But it must also be remembered that Willard is not the same man physically that he was when he was advancing to the championship and that he has passed the stage in life where he can get in shape to fight."

Notre Dame Books Game With Tigers

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 21.—Notre Dame will meet the Princeton Tigers on the football field at Princeton on October 20 next season. Knute Rockne, coach of the South Bend squad, announced today. The schedule also includes a game with the Army in New York City or October 13.

The Notre Dame-Princeton game was made possible for the Fighting Irish when Nebraska and Notre Dame switched dates with Kansas, the Jayhawkers playing the homecoming game here October 20 and the Notre Dame game moving up to November 10.

POOR PROSPECTS FOR WINNER

Superior Begins Basketball Practice—New Gym About Complete.

SUPERIOR, Neb., Dec. 21.—Superior high school has started basketball practice with poor prospects for a winning team in the opinion of Coach George Barclay. Captain-elect Dinnel who is the only player in the school who went to last year's tournament, broke his shoulder during the first few minutes of the Thanksgiving football game and has not yet recovered for practice. From the squad that is out, indications are that the team will be light with doubtful speed.

DEMPSEY MAY GO TO EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—If Jack Dempsey doesn't receive some kind of an attractive offer from American promoters he will sail for Europe late in January, according to Dan McKittrick, his eastern representative.

Frisch or George Burns Wanted as Head of the Players' Union

Frank Frisch, second baseman of the New York Giants, and George Burns of the Cincinnati Reds but long with the Giants, have been suggested to head the new baseball players' union, an organization which Ray Cannon of Milwaukee has long been working so hard to organize.

Frisch said yesterday that he would not run for office but that he was with the players. Burns is yet to be heard from. The slate proposed by Cannon for the new union follows:

For president, Frank Frisch of the New York Giants or George Burns of the Cincinnati Reds.

For vice president, Jack Fournier of the St. Louis Cardinals or Jake Daubert of the Reds.

For secretary, Dave Bancroft of the Giants.

Cy Williams and Arthur Fletcher, now manager of the Phillies, and Earl Smith, catcher of the Giants, also are mentioned as possible candidates for office.

The preponderance of names of New York players in the list of possible officers of the new organization did not make a favorable impression on John McGraw. He was emphatic in his comment on the proposed union and said:

"The major league players do not need a union of this kind. They are well protected and are treated better than at any time in the history of baseball. The minor leagues are in need of a protective organization, especially among those clubs which do not observe the draft rule with the majors. These fellows are held in bondage. They are forced to spend their lives in the minors and cannot rise in their profession because the minor leagues refuse to accept the restoration of the draft rule. If I were a player I would refuse to sign with a league that did not observe the draft."

"The minors at the present time need a protective organization of this kind for their own future advancement in the game, but the majors, who are pulling down such fabulous salaries, are showing nothing more than ungratefulness to their employers."

Frisch, who is in business with his father, was asked whether or not he was a candidate for president of this union and said:

"I have heard nothing about it yet. I would refuse to accept the nomination for president of the union or any other office, but I want to stick with the rest of the players. If they form an organization I will be one of them."

"It will not be because the New York club have not treated me well. They have. I am satisfied with the present conditions and always have been, but I owe it to the players to stick with them."

YANKS LET RUBE BENTON ALONE

Colonel Huston Explains Why He Didn't Go After Former Giant.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The New York Yankees did not go after Rube Benton, former Giant pitcher who starred with St. Paul last season, because "Ban" Johnson said he didn't want him in the American league and a National league manager wouldn't do us any good," Col. Huston of the Yanks said.

Coach Henry F. Schulte who has been conducting conferences for high school officials over the state is on the home stretch now. He stopped here for a few hours Thursday enroute to New York. More interest is rapidly developing and the conferences are putting all officials and coaches in closer touch with the university. A meeting will be held Friday at Nebraska City.

The London Times reported the Russian soviet government was taking steps toward the calling of a conference of Baltic states to close the Baltic to warships of outside nations.

WOULD KNOW FRENCH AIMS

AMERICA TO ASK POINCARÉ TO LAY CARDS ON TABLE.

Statement on Utmost Concessions on Reparations and Kindred Questions to Be Bought of Paris.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—France soon may be asked by the United States to place all her cards on the table.

With the success or failure of the American move looking toward a solution of the old world's economic crisis virtually hanging on the attitude of France, this government is understood to be preparing to ask Premier Poincaré for a definite statement as to the utmost concessions
he is willing to make on reparations and kindred questions in order to relieve the situation.

This government realizes the Poincaré government faces a difficult political situation because of the strong demand in France for the use of force in the hope of compelling Germany to pay the huge reparations figure which has been imposed upon her,
and the inquiry to the French government will be propounded in the most friendly manner.

This government has received the German proposal calling for a commission of experts, preferably Americans, to revise the reparations down to the highest possible figure that Germany can pay. This proposal caused unusual interest in official circles. It is believed that any plan that the United States agrees upon will be acceptable in the main to Great Britain, thus making it necessary to harmonize as much as possible the wide differences between France and Germany, if a solution of the problem is to be reached.

The plan of this government is to get the views of all the powers and then outline a common ground upon which negotiations could be opened with the United States acting as a sort of mediator. State department officials today denied that the international discussions between this government and the allies had reached the stage where a definite American proposal had been framed and said there was no truth in reports from London that the United States at the request of a trade commission headed by German chancellor Cuno had proposed an American commission of businessmen to revise the reparations figure.

This government is inclined to believe that France, while so far as assuming an unyielding attitude in direct negotiations with the Germans, will manifest a more conciliatory attitude in response to direct inquiries from the United States. Georges Clemenceau, it is believed here, soon will confer with the French government and state that American public opinion demands some concessions be made, but that Germany be forced to pay reparations at the limit of her ability.

REJECTS SECOND PAROLE

Alabama Negro Refuses to Go Out Into the World After Forty Years in Prison.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 21.—Convicted in Mobile in January, 1875, and given a life sentence on a statutory charge, Henderson Poppins, a negro, was granted a pardon by the governor in 1888 and settled in Elmore county. In 1902 he was convicted of the same offense and given a ninety-nine-year term.

Governor Kilby paroled Poppins
Monday.

Poppins had been behind the prison bars for forty-three years and after being at freedom for three hours he wandered back to the prison at We-tumpka and asked to be permitted to enter again. The governor was notified that the parole was not to be used. Poppins is about ninety years old.

APPROVE THE NAVAL BILL

Measure Carrying Suggestion for
New Disarmament Conference Favorably Reported.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The naval appropriation bill, carrying a suggestion to President Harding to call a new disarmament conference, was favorably reported to the senate by the appropriations committee today.

The senate committee added $1,787, 840 to the amount appropriated under the house bill which brings the total to $295,604,378.

The chief additional expenditures authorized by the senate committee include $550,000 for the manufacture of torpedoes and $1,000,000 for the naval reserve force.

comed! No need to ask you which you prefer to give him.

Nor is it a question of expense—it's but a matter of choosing gifts for men at a store which makes a study of men's likes and a business of pleasing them.

CLOTHING Makes a Very Fine Gift

THE different members of some families will unite in giving a suit or overcoat to Dad, Son or Brother, and lucky indeed is the man who gets such a fine remembrance. Of course it should be a suit or overcoat that you will be proud to see him wear—you will be if it's from Mayer Bros. Co.

Why Not a Smoking Jacket?

Somewhat there's a real relaxation in changing to a smoking jacket after a day's work. There's hardly any gift from which he would get more use or pleasure. Styles vary from those of velvets or brocades.

tell you how appropriate is something associated with his game. We have everything for the golfer's wardrobe from the suits to the shoes. Golf jackets with sleeves, golf waistcoats without sleeves, sweaters, scarfs, caps, gloves, hose.
And of course they're all in styles that meet the golfer's to select just the sort of slippers he will enjoy and brella that rolls snug and neat, with an attractive curved

Shirts Play an Important Part

There are several things one should think of when giving shirts —things that mean a great deal to the pleasure your gift will hold. Patterns and colors should be selected thoughtfully of

Handkerchiefs Yearly Favorite

He will never get the idea that you gave handkerchiefs because you couldn't think of anything else if you give him a half dozen of these fine linen ones with his initial in one corner or perhaps those with colored borders or even plain ones, of fine quality. We specially urge early selection if initialed 'kerchiefs are preferred.

Mufflers in Every Style

For skating or motoring there are great, warm knit-street or dress wear, beautiful silk mufflers in quieter hues.

Three were each fined $5 and costs. They are R. L. Burham, 1742 South Fourteenth, E. Mumby, 1446 South Eleventh, and Arthur Miller, 2306 South Eighth. Albert Carter, 3436 South Tenth, was dismissed of a charge of speeding.
The state board of control announced Thursday it had appointed Mrs. M. D. Butler bookkeeper in place of Howard Schlegel, resigned. Mrs. Butler was last announced by Governor-elect Bryan as the one to be in temporary charge of the department of finance after January 4. Mrs. Butler is chief clerk of the finance department. Secretary Philip F. Brown of that department is to retire January 4, but has offered his assistance to the incoming governor.
State Tax Commissioner W. H. Osborne who holds a constitutional office has been relegated to office rooms in the basement of the state house under the board of control rooms. He and the state fire marshal were required to vacate rooms needed by the house of representative and both were to find space in the back room of the secretary of state. The fire marshal got there first with his furniture and no room was left for the state tax commissioner. This shifting of office quarters every two years is caused by the fact that state departments have grown faster than the capitol. The new capitol will be large enough for all but it may not be ready for occupancy for a few years.
Postmaster McClay is working to get people to bring in their war savings stamps at once, or turn them over to the banks. The stamps mature January 1, 1932, and do not earn interest after that date. Arrangements have been made by the treasury department whereby they can be turned in before January 1 for transmittal to the federal reserve bank for payment by draft on January 1, 1932. If owners of the war savings stamps delay in turning them in, the payment until January 1, payment may be delayed a month or more on account of a lack of funds at the local office. Mr. McClay says that approximately $300,000 was outstanding in the stamps November 15 and that to December 15, $110,000 of this amount has been taken up, leaving $190,000 still in the hands of the public in this vicinity.
Acting Governor P. A. Barrows is preparing to file another claim for salary as acting governor, altho the district court recently decided that he is not entitled to extra pay over and above his pay as lieutenant governor. Mr. Barrows will file a claim for ten days of extra time served a December at the rate of $23.99 per working day. It will be filed with State Auditor George W. Marsh. The auditor has already decided that he cannot honor such a claim by paying it out of the present quarter's pay due Governor McKelvie. December claim of the acting governor will go to the legislature for consideration or be appealed to the district court. Mr. Barrows said it is not the money he is after. "I desire to know whether the constitution of 1875 means what it says," said the acting governor.
The Golden Pheasant, a new tea room, bakery, delicatessen and confectionery shop, will be opened Friday morning by C. L. Hoenshel in the store room at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and N streets. It will be an exclusive shop and it is the intention of the proprietor to feature out-of-ordinary things in the menu, baked goods and furnishings for the tea room. The interior has been given a rather startling appearance by the use of much canary yellow and black in decorating wall cases, counters and the tables, chairs and booths in the tea room. Ivory lights will be used to throw a golden glow over the room. The furniture and fixtures have been designed especially for this shop. All of the baking for the shop and the service in the tea room will be in charge of women workers.

CIVIL SUITS ARE PLANNED

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE TO SUE HARNESS COMPANY.
Cases Also Being Prepared Against Company Which Purchased Surplus Meat From War Department.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Civil or criminal suits, perhaps both, will be filed "very soon" against the United States Harness company of West Virginia to protect the government's interest in war contracts, an official of the department of justice stated today at the hearing on the impeachment charges against Attorney General B. F. Reed.
Col. Henry D. Anderson, special assistant attorney general, in disclosing that legal action would be taken on the famous harness contracts, would not say what amount of money the government hopes to recover or what officials of the company might have to face criminal proceedings.
Anderson said the department of justice had completed its investigation of the harness contract and would file suit as soon as a few details were cleared up.
Suits are also being prepared against the Thomas Roberts company of Philadelphia, in connection with the purchase of surplus meat from the war department, Assistant Attorney General B. F. Reed told the committee.

SANTA LEAVES FILM COLONY

HAYS SPEEDING EAST AFTER BRINGING HOLLYWOOD SMILES.

Producer Declares in Week Movie
Czar Has Advanced Industry
More Than in Past Five Years.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.—Hollywood believes in Santa Claus.

But the big boys and beautiful girls of Glendale think they are the white whiskers the benign, shrewd features of Will H. Hays.

Hollywood's Christmas stocking was pretty full today, as its own particular Santa was whirled eastward aboard a transcontinental limited.

Hays' belief visit to the picture city had resulted in the following Christmas joys:

1.—Wally Reid winning his battle against serious illness, with Hays' blessing, so that the star's lapse does not affect the integrity of filmdom.

2.—Fatty Arbuckle restored to grace of the camera.

3.—Ed Holroyd, author of the "Sins of Hollywood," tales of petting parties and strip poker supposedly based on the film colony's life, under indictment for improper use of the mails.

4.—Investigation of the narcotic traffic urged upon state and federal officials.

5.—One hundred million dollars worth of equipment was Hays Christmas present to a special motion picture committee of the national educational association; same to be used in developing the film as an educational factor.

"In one week Will Hays, with terrific, dynamic energy and his intense humanness, has advanced the movie industry more than it has advanced in the past five years," one producer stated. "We producers thought we knew all about the manner in which this industry ought to be handled. We found we didn't know anything. Hays turned the industry upside down in a week, swept us off our feet then sold his big idea to the public and motion picture people alike."

"Hays set out to clean up, and to restore confidence in the industry. He did it in just one week thru being human."

Hollywood's head was in a whirl thru all the blessings showered down by its little "czar" but the colony was "gold" for Hays. On the occasion of Hays' first visit the impression was abroad that he was a mere figurehead.
Today film land was convinced he meant business.

THE UNCONSCIOUS SINNER

By Hazel Deyo
Batchelor

(Copyright, 1922, by The Public Ledger Company.)

Because Cleo Ridgely refused to marry him, Dick Wheeler attempts suicide. He is saved by the appearance of his guardian,
Carey Phelps, who, when he hears the story,
believes Cleo to be a scheming adventuress, and decides to pay her back by winning her love, and then telling her his real opinion of her. On the night that Cleo and Carey meet, Cleo receives a proposal from Bob Ellis-worth, and this fact clouds her happiness in meeting Carey whom she immediately likes. Carey looks no time in besting his campaign, and asks Cleo if he may call. A few minutes before she is expecting him,
Bob Ellsworth arrives on the scene.

CHAPTER XV.

The Worst Happens.

Cleo realized that whatever she had to say to Bob must be said quickly. If Carey Phelps arrived and understood the situation he would immediately jump to the conclusion that she was a girl who liked to trifle with men.

Desperately she faced Bob, her fingers tightly interlaced and her face drained of color.

Her voice was very low as she spoke.

"Listen, Bob. Last night I ran away because I knew what you were going to say to me and I didn't want to hurt
you. I don't care for you that way, and I can't promise anything because I know that I'll never feel any different."

"You did care for me, Cleo, until last night, you cared for me!"

Cleo shook her head.

"You're mistaken, Bob."

"You did, I could swear it! You made me think you did, anyway."

"Bob, don't say that! There was almost a sob in Cleo's voice. "Say you don't mean that, Bob. Why, we've never been more than just good friends."

"I can't say I don't mean it when it's true. You may not have meant to encourage me, but you did. Once I thought it was Dick Wheeler that you liked, and when he went abroad I decided that, after all, I was mistaken.
Now I'm beginning to realize the truth. You probably got tired of poor old Dick, just as you're tired of me. I suppose there's some one else just about ready to jump into my shoes."

Cleo had dropped back from him and a queer little hunted look had leaped into her eyes. She was realizing how all too true Bob's accusation would seem if Carey Phelps were to walk into the room at that moment. First Dick, then Bob, and now Carey Phelps! But it wasn't true, in her heart of hearts she knew it wasn't true. She was caught in a queer web of circumstances, that was all, and just now every way out seemed like a blind alley.

"Is there some one else?" Bob was asking roughly. " weren't you expecting some one tonight? Answer me truthfully if you can!"

To Cleo came the sudden temptation to lie, but almost instantly her head went up and she met Bob's angry eyes squarely.

"Yes, I am expecting some one tonight, but what you say isn't true."

"Of course not," he sneered. "I wouldn't expect you to admit it, but mark my words some day you'll be caught in your own net and then it will be your turn to suffer the consequences."

Without another word he left the room, but he had hardly reached the hall when the bell rang imperiously.
Cleo's heart leaped and then contracted, as the some one had seized it and were slowly squeezing the blood out of it. The two men would pass each other in the hall and it was inevitable that recognition would take place. What then? What would be the reaction in the heart of each man?
Bob, of course, would believe that his summing of her had been true, and Carey Phelps could not fail to see that a scene of some kind had taken place prior to his coming.

Unconscious of the fact Cleo swayed lightly as she stood there listening.
She could hear Mary on her way to open the door and then there was an unconsciously long wait before the door closed.

Out in the hall both men had come face to face under the hall light. As Cleo had feared the recognition had been instantaneous and altho neither man spoke, Carey realized with lightning-like intuition that this was the boy Cleo had been at the dance with last night, and that evidently she had just given him his conge.

HE MADE ONE SPEECH.

LONDON (By Mail).—During his campaign in connection with the general election, Harold Stranger, independent liberal candidate for Newbury, offered to give £25 to a local charity if any member of his audience could prove that General Brown, the conservative M. P. in the last parliament, had ever spoken in the house of commons. A man in the audience rose and declared that General Brown once said: "It's stuffy in here; please open the windows." Mr. Stranger paid up. Incidentally, General Brown was re-elected.

COURT FREES WAR GUILTY

NINETY-THREE CASES DISMISSED
BY LEIPZIG BENCH.

Defendants Declared Proven Neither
Guilty Nor Innocent of Crime Against German Law—771
Cases Remain.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—The supreme court of Leipzig, in a recent session today, dismissed ninety-three "war guilt" cases tried in accordance with the Versailles treaty.

Generals von Gallwitz, von Mackenzen, von Below and von Dietrich and Professor Goetz were among those whose cases were dropped. Many witnesses were heard, but proceedings were strictly private, and allied representatives were not present.

The court declared the defendants had been proven neither absolutely guilty nor innocent of crime against German law.

Seven hundred and seventy-one cases are pending. The Germans on trial include the former Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, accused of deportations from northern France during the war, and the duke of Wurtemberg, who ordered troops massacred at Namen, and other famous officers.

The allies drew up a long list of those considered guilty and required the Germans themselves to try them.

MEN AND THINGS

If I had had the money and the inclination I could have bought, merely from the display in the windows, enough revolvers and other deadly weapons on my way downtown today to equip a fair-sized troop of roughnecks. These are offered freely and without question to anybody who wants them and has the price. Yet we wonder why there are so many crimes of violence, so many holdups! Haven't we energy enough left to protect ourselves effectively by protecting the source of supply of firearms? It is probably not possible to stop bootlegging of guns, but we would have the satisfaction of knowing we had done our best to save our lives and our cashboxes.

What's the matter with the newspaper business? The old-time editors and reporters who thought the people read them because they wanted to keep abreast of the times and who desired the news and the excitement of the times, are being supplanted by men who are as much interested in the editorial side. In Omaha the other day a big lawsuit was on in federal court, involving the question of whether three of the railroad should have their state taxes cut a little over a million.

One Omaha newspaper didn't mention the hearing, another perfunctorily referred to it without telling what it was about, and the third gave an intelligent but brief account of it. The principal stories played up on the front pages of those papers covered what a ranchman said when told he had been sued for $100,000 for breach of promise and what Omaha women thought of the new fad of getting a new wedding ring for the old one, a scheme designed by some clever jeweler to increase business.

What makes the cost of living steadily rise? My own notion is that it is because we have overstimulated by tariffs and other means, the business of manufacturing in this country, and that the manufacturers must adopt policies of doing business that increase the sale of their output. That is the only reason possible to explain why they change their designs of the things we wear and use at such frequent intervals. A householder needed a new hat on a kitchen faucet the other day. The plumber he tried to make the change said he couldn't do anything for him because they were not making that style of faucet any more. He promised to rummage thru his shop junk to see if he could find one, but the last report was that the householder would have to put in a new faucet at an expense many times that of the nut that should have been at hand.

My favorite educator says that the real trouble with the farmers who are talking so forcibly about centralization in the hands of the state educational authorities is that they are feeling so poor right now that they do not feel able to pay a sufficient sum to get good schools for their children. While he admits that the net result is to get better wages for teachers, the still more important result that follows from a refusal to give certificates to teachers who have had but two years' normal training is that the farmers' children are getting their education now at the hands of people who can tell them something they ought to know. The rural school is no longer the stop gap for the neighborhood girl on her way to college or matrimony.

Folks who are talking about state parks and their necessity and desirability are but whetting our appetite for luxuries that there is no possibility of our getting for a long time. Personally we would like to live in a grand-looking mansion, set in a bower of trees, towards which stretch winding roads and walks. We want it well-heated in winter and well-ventilated in summer, and gables and ivy and so on. But the present state of our finances all it represents to us is a grand little vision of the, might-be. The same with state parks and the people, we take it.

Governor McKelvie says that the trouble with the farmer is that he has been sitting around plying himself so heavily and so heavily for a year or more that he has failed to observe how things are really brightening up for him. The farmer seems to be more than half right, too. With wheat in Chicago above $1.25 a bushel and corn soaring above 75 cents, why should the farmer repine and moan? A lot of the wheat and corn has gone to market, of course, but the car shortage has certainly made a lot of money for some farmers.

WALT MASON

The H. G. Wells Fan.

I'm reading all that Wells is writing, his volumes full of sense and snap, his books descriptive of the Fighting that wiped the Kaiser off the map; his history, whose scope surprises all men who would world annals know; his tales, in which he analyzes the souls of John and Richard Roe. His tracts, in which new creeds are fashioned, and old ones to the dump are tossed, his essays, soaring and impassioned—I read them all, and hang the cost. And thus my golden hours are taken, I have no time for honest toil; my aunts must scrub to earn the bacon, my grandma tills the fertile soil. The pastor says he's sorely smitten because I go to church no more; but books by Wells have just been written and I must get them at the store. The statesmen seek me at my hotel, to ask me why I do not vote; they find me with a new Wells novel, that strikes a high and ringing note. The grocer comes, his pencil whittling and counts up sums he says are due; he sees me sitting up with Britling, and Mrs. Britling sees it thru. If one would go where Wells is leading, he has no time for other things; the long, long hours he spends in reading, until the village curfew rings. If Wells would take a brief vacation, I might get something useful done, regain my long lost reputation for industry and triumphs won.

A CHRISTMAS PARTY

By Walter Wellman.

Here's the tree all decorated weeks before Christmas and Lulu is planning her Christmas party already. To write in the names of a girl and a boy in the first and second upright columns, respectively, and complete the names of three more boys, and two more girls in the horizontal columns. Who are they?

The Military Goats.

Curry, M. C. for Sacramento, may not be a scintillating success as a forest conservationist, but he is better as a defender of the army. He is manfully seeking to repeal the congressional act, chargeable to Representative Anthony, former military authority of Kansas, whereby the army is compelled to turn out two or three thousand officers that have cost the government $50,000 apiece to train, in order to make a paper showing of economy which can't be found when the totals are footed. More home consumption bunk—and the worst of it is that it is never consumed, and there's no appetite for it!—Sunset.
